

Author's declaration on submission

IJURR has received several submissions which included, to varying extents, material previously published in other journals. In one case, we reluctantly copied our rejection letter not only to the author, but also to the author's home institution, the editor of the other journal involved, and the editors of other major urban studies journals. In others, we have insisted on inclusion of a full and clear statement of the differences. IJURR and other journals take a strong stand against 'self-plagiarism' when authors duplicate material in papers to different journals. By submitting your paper online, you are acknowledging that you know IJURR's policy on this issue.

Please read the following carefully. An author may submit a paper to IJURR only if he or she agrees to the following:

- 1 The author warrants that this Article is an original work, has not been published before and is not being considered for publication elsewhere;
- 2 The author warrants that this Article contains no violation of any existing copyright or other third party right or any material of an obscene, indecent, libellous or otherwise unlawful nature and that to the best of the author's knowledge this Article does not infringe the rights of others;
- 3 The author understands IJURR's procedures on alleged plagiarism and misconduct (set out below), and agrees to follow these in the event of such an allegation;
- 4 The author warrants that in the case of a multi-authored Article the author has obtained authorization to enter into this Agreement on behalf of all co-authors.

IJURR Procedures on Plagiarism or Misconduct

It sometimes happens that the reviewer of a paper or one of the editors of the journal suspects that sections of a paper may have been plagiarised from the work of other scholars or that data have been fabricated or falsified. By plagiarism, we mean that sections of a paper have been copied or paraphrased, or that analysis has been duplicated, without adequate acknowledgement of the source. In order to protect legitimate scholarship, IJURR has adopted the following procedure in the event of suspected or alleged plagiarism or other misconduct:

- 1 The journal will ask the author for an explanation and will endeavour to give the author a full opportunity to provide this.

- 2 If the journal considers that the author's explanation is inadequate, then the journal will write to any appropriate institution, presenting the allegations and relevant evidence, and recommending that the institution takes appropriate action; 'appropriate' institutions might include academic or related institutions that employ the author or to which the author is affiliated, or in exceptional circumstances a funding body, regulatory agency or professional society; the journal will write to the appropriate department chair, research centre director, or manager at the appropriate institution.
- 3 The journal will inform the author of this, at the same time as telling the author that the journal will not consider further submissions from him or her.
- 4 The journal will not divulge the identity of any author who is suspected of plagiarism or misconduct to any reviewer, including any reviewer who made the allegation, or to any other person outside of the journal's editorial team and the appropriate representative of the author's employer or institution, unless or until the institution in paragraph 2 reaches a finding, in which case the journal might communicate this to other relevant parties.
